WHAT A BUYER WOULD CONCLUDE

A well-run agency that a serious buyer would engage with. Growth is real, the client base is genuinely spread, and the operation already uses AI in delivery. The work left is proving the earnings are transferable, because that is where most of what you have on the table still sits.

THE THINGS A BUYER RAISES FIRST

01 · FINANCIAL QUALITY · 11 POINTS

Earnings are founder-inflated and may not transfer to a buyer

What you told us in this area: 50% - 69%; Records are maintained regularly, with some cleanup or clarification typically required; Generally stable.

Buyers rebuild your P&L with a market-rate salary in your seat before they price anything. Add-backs they cannot document get struck out, and it is the earnings that survive that exercise, not the ones on your statements, that the multiple gets applied to.

02 · LEADERSHIP & FOUNDER INDEPENDENCE · 5 POINTS

Founder is a decision bottleneck

What you told us in this area: Less than 30%; 20% - 39%; There are a few managers or team leads, but most important decisions still flow through the owner(s).

Buyers model what the business does in its first year without you in it. Where every decision routes through the founder, that model produces a slower and smaller company, and they price the version they can actually run, not the one you can.

03 · CLIENT CONCENTRATION · 4 POINTS

Largest accounts are single-threaded

What you told us in this area: 4 - 6; Less than 10%; Relatively resilient. Demand has generally remained stable through changing conditions.

A relationship that runs through one person on each side is one resignation away from disappearing. Buyers test for this directly, asking who else at the client knows the business, and price accounts where the answer is nobody as revenue that may not survive the transition.

WHERE YOUR POINTS ARE, AND WHERE THEY ARE NOT

Eight areas carry the ValScore. For each one, how many points your answers and your advisor's review have earned between them, and how many are still on the table.

YOUR PLAN, IN THE ORDER THAT MOVES THE NUMBER MOST

01 · FINANCIAL QUALITY

Earnings are founder-inflated and may not transfer to a buyer

Normalize owner add-backs and one-time items so earnings reflect true, transferable profitability.

02 · LEADERSHIP & FOUNDER INDEPENDENCE

Founder is a decision bottleneck

Delegate day-to-day decisions and document decision authority.

03 · CLIENT CONCENTRATION

Largest accounts are single-threaded

Add executive sponsors and formal account plans on the biggest relationships.

04 · OPERATIONAL MATURITY

Core processes aren't documented

Document core operating processes as repeatable SOPs.

3 areas have points available and nothing prescribed yet: Documentation Credibility, Growth Trajectory, Strategic Positioning. Your advisor will pick those up at the review conversation.

ABOUT THESE FIGURES

This is an estimate produced by a model, not a valuation, an appraisal or an offer. It is built from the answers you gave us, which we have not audited or independently verified. What a business actually sells for depends on the buyer, the timing, the deal terms and what comes out in diligence, none of which this assessment measures. Treat the range as a starting point for a conversation, not a price, and take your own professional advice before acting on it. Ranges are a 5% band either side of the midpoint, rounded to the nearest ten thousand, and scores are shown on a 0-100 scale.
